

"Big Man"
by Gregg Standridge and Terry Ware

The big man says that he's got a big plan
He says that I'd better believe it
He did it once, he's gonna do it again
No matter what he's gonna repeat it

I wonder how long this might last
And how long can I stand to see it
It's got a big toe that's stuck in the past
And I know I really don't need it

(Chorus)

*It's the same old name with a different face
Staring back with empty eyes
They see no pain
They find no grace
Watching worlds, watching worlds collide*

The big man blinks and the big man grins
The big man never speaks
The true path found in the higher ground
Is something that he never seeks

(Chorus)

*It's the same old name with a different face
Staring back with empty eyes
They see no pain
They have no grace
Watching worlds, watching worlds, watching worlds collide*
